

ChinaXTC is a response to the cultural displacement and re-identification the Chinese are experiencing as it opens to the West. There is a changing relationship between politics, culture and how it articulates within contemporary art and popular culture. This series interrogates the "NEW" China, it's locality and histories. It questions in a broader sense global consumerist culture, the convergence of traditional thinking models, occupation and new hybrid economies.